Exam Name: IBM Forms 4 - Form Design and Development

Version: DEMO

QUESTION 1

All of the following are valid methods of using a schema with IBM Forms, EXCEPT which one?

- A. Embed schema directly in an XForms instance.
- B. Reference external schema on local file system.
- C. Embed schema directly in an XForms model.
- D. Reference external schema within the Viewer's schema directory.
- E. Reference external schema on the internet.

Answer: A

QUESTION 2

Jane is given an XML schema by her company's IT department, and is asked to build an IBM Form that captures data according to that schema. How can Jane build the form?

- A. IBM Forms does not support schemas, so this is not possible.
- B. Using IBM Forms Designer, Jane can drag and drop the schema onto her form page. The Designer automatically creates the appropriate UI items according to what was specified in the schema.
- C. Using IBM Forms Designer, Jane embeds the schema into her form, creates an instance of that schema, then drags and drops from the instance onto the form. The Designer then creates the appropriate UI items according to what was specified in the schema.
- D. Jane has to use another tool to create an XML instance of the schema. She adds the XML instance to her form using IBM Forms Designer, then drags and drops from the instance onto the form. The Designer then creates the appropriate UI items according to what was specified in the schema.

Answer: C

QUESTION 3

Charlie has been tasked with creating a dropdown menu whose choices are dependent on the selection of another dropdown on the form. He has created the following XPath query in the dropdown's nodeset:

```
<xforms:select1 ref="instance('Generated')/page1/selected_flavor">
  <xforms:itemset nodeset="instance('frozenTreatsData')/flavors/choice[category_id=current()../selected_category]">
  </xforms:itemset>
</xforms:select1>
```

What does the function current() do?

- A. Returns the current element.
- B. Returns the id of the current node.
- C. Returns the context back to the "Generated" instance so that the selected_category element is referenced.
- D. Returns the context back to the "frozenTreatsData" instance so that the selected_category element is referenced.

Answer: C
